

Dying Love

By Michael Paulson

Createspace, United States, 2006. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Are these chicken eggs, Rita? Dr. Clayton Niles and his wife, Rita, were having breakfast in the kitchen of their oceanfront home; just outside of Galveston, Texas. Clayton, with his stoic middle-aged determination, sat at the table studying his breakfast - two eggs fried sunny-side up - from multiple angles. Rita sat across from her perennially perplexed husband, buttering a slice of toast. Clayton raised the plate to eye-level and tilted it slightly; taking advantage of the sunlight streaming in through the adjacent window to further interrogate his meal. They don't look like chicken eggs, he remarked, with more than a hint of suspicion. An impatient sigh crept from between Rita's full lips. What else would they be, Clayton? He shifted his lanky, blonde frame and twisted his mouth to one side as if repulsed; still studying the eggs. Your mother did the shopping, yesterday; didn't she? He set the plate down and picked up a fork before adding, The yolks are too big for chicken eggs. After which, Clayton leaned his face down to...
