Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from On Methods Used and Results Obtained in Making Germicidal-Efficiency Tests of a Disinfectant: For Use in Railway Sanitation The arrival of Asiatic cholera in the harbor of New York in the autumn of 1892 directed general attention to matters of public sanitation. The disease was brought upon steamships, and much of the alarm that was felt was due to the knowledge that cholera might be carried all over the land by the railroads. The importance of railway sanitation had long been known to experts, and the presence of cholera at our doors served to inform the public. Fortunately, in 1892, the disease was confined to New York. Recognizing the probability of a recurrence of the danger and the possibility of a more serious invasion in 1893, and anxious to be ready for any emergency, the officers of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company determined to have thoroughly tested, with respect to its efficiency or germicidal power, a disinfectant of their own manufacture, which, since 1885, they have been using in their cars, closets, urinals, passenger stations, freight-houses, shops, etc., or wherever a liquid disinfectant is applicable upon a railway system. The extent and public importance of such disinfection may be realized from the fact that this company operates altogether nearly 8,000 miles of railway. It forms one of the principal avenues of communication between the principal seaports of the United States and the great West. It carries over its lines yearly many thousands of immigrants, and directly connects one with another the largest cities in the United States. It is therefore held to be one of the most important railway systems in America; and it has a...
